Multicultural Media, Telecom and Internet Council

The Multicultural Media, Telecom and Internet Council (MMTC) is generally recognized as the nation's leading advocate for the advancement of minorities and women in the media, telecommunications, and high tech industries. Our goal is to connect people to opportunities created in a digital economy.

About Our Work. MMTC works with our communities, policymakers, and other advocacy organizations to achieve our mission through:

- ◆ Convening several conferences, meetings, and seminars, including the Broadband and Social Justice Summit, Access to Capital and Telecom Policy Conference, Net Equality Tour, “Best Minds” policy committee, New Telecom and Internet Policy Task Force, and Digital Equity Roundtable convenings of national civil rights leaders and organizations
- ◆ Conducting and publishing research studies and White Papers on the impact of the latest media, telecom, and tech issues on historically underrepresented groups and entrepreneurs
- ◆ Filing comments and briefs in proceedings before the FCC, Congress, and the courts
- ◆ Facilitating management, training, and ownership opportunities for minority and women entrepreneurs through our media and telecom brokerage
- ◆ Publishing the Broadband and Social Justice (BBSJ.org) weblog and newsletter covering the latest media, telecom, and tech issues
